

Eva Beazar (1987) is a visual artist.

She explores time as a personal experience rather than an abstract concept. In her work, time is made tangible through images and moving visuals, revealing its fleeting nature, variability, and elusive rhythms.

The work is tactile and fragile, inviting touch and engagement, while maintaining a sense of vulnerability. She is drawn to the tension between clock time and inner time, and to the delicate balance between slowness, acceleration, and stillness.

Her practice often grows out of moments encountered during walks, observations captured in words, sketches, or photographs. These elements are combined across different media, allowing the final work to gradually take shape.

In recent years, she has participated in several residencies, including WIELS and KOAS in Elsene. She has also taken part in various exhibitions and talks, and serves as editor and final responsible editor at Coconuts Magazine, which is published annually.
